Special Issue

The most common question and request we have received over the last three months is:

"Can I get a copy of your first issue?"

New subscribers ask us this all the time. Either they want their new subscription to start with Volume 1, Issue 1 rather than Issue #2 or they want to buy a copy of the issue on special order.

We also have had a problem with deliveries of the first issue we are investigating. Too many subscribers have written us that they never received the first issue for us to think it was a random loss issue. Someone in the business emailed us saying that they used in some types of mailing labels often do not stick to certain paper stocks, especially the heavy fiber types used when making magazines, but we aren't sure what the problem is or even if one exists at all. As I said, we're investigating.

Plus we distributed so many copies of the premier issue for promotional and press reasons we literally did not have a single copy in the office for ourselves.

We also had a problem with Issue #1 that I want to correct. I originally promised interviews with real estate authors John T. Bill Mencarow but due to a huge number of scheduling conflicts and a technical recording failure we were unable to do the first issue. I deeply admire both these men and they have a lot to say about real estate. That's why I wanted both in the premier issue of the magazine. We did substitute two other articles for this loss but they were not the articles I wanted. I'm hoping we can solve this problem by FINALLY conducting the interviews and getting back on track here.

SO.....

I've decided to reprint the entire first issue into the second. This way everyone who has subscribed through the issue date of both and each issue will be exactly as I wanted it.

Our target date on this special issue is August 31, 2005. We are going to try to shoot for a sooner release but we won't go earlier than that date in any case.
